

About Me

Billy Herrington (July 14, 1969 – March 2, 2018) was an American model, actor, and internet personality. Originally known for his work as a fitness model and actor, he unexpectedly became an internet sensation in Japan and across the world. In the late 2000s, clips from his videos were remixed and shared widely on Nico Nico Douga, a popular Japanese video platform. Fans lovingly referred to him as “Aniki”, meaning “Big Brother,” a term that symbolizes respect, strength, and friendship. Over time, Billy became a beloved figure of Gachimuchi culture, a unique internet subculture blending humor, remix music, and memes. His iconic phrases and personality have inspired countless fan tributes, animations, and even music remixes. Beyond the memes, Billy Herrington is remembered as a kind, humble, and inspiring person who appreciated his fans deeply. His legacy continues to live on through online communities that celebrate his energy, positivity, and unforgettable presence.
